Judge Re-affirms St. Joseph Hospital's Obligation to Uphold Emergency Services Law

By Ryan Hutson
newsroom@northcoastjournal.com

There were no winners in the case of the People vs. Providence St. Joseph Hospital last week, as Judge Timothy Canning decided to move forward with the preliminary injunction hearing rather than side with either legal argument presented on Friday. Giving the hospital's attorneys another opportunity to present their case related to gynecological emergency health care, Canning directed the California Attorney General's Office to schedule a preliminary injunction hearing within 90 days, while keeping the existing stipulated agreement "in full force and effect" in the interim.

The unfolding legal battle could have broad implications for one of the largest not-for-profit Catholic-run hospital groups in the nation, as Providence angles for a First Amendment freedom of religion claim that, according to the AG's office, puts a religious belief system above the immediate healthcare needs of California's families and violates several state laws, particularly California's Emergency Services Law (ESL).

Canning's ruling effectively gives Providence St. Joseph another opportunity to present additional arguments against the state's enforcement efforts, including its First Amendment right to freedom of religion.

The case, which originated from the hospital's refusal to provide emergency abortion care to Anna Nusslock in February of 2024, now proceeds to a preliminary injunction hearing and then, potentially to trial. A case management conference and possible trial setting — expected to be set in late 2026 — are scheduled for Oct. 27.

Canning also instructed the parties to resolve ongoing discovery disputes prior to the next hearing, after deputy attorney general Martine D'Agostino said the state's office had been "rebuffed" in formal requests for information and documents made in April.

The hearing opened with a minor disturbance when a court reporter asked a woman with a fussy baby to leave the packed courtroom. When an audience member loudly objected, saying, "No," from the back of the room, Canning immediately addressed the interruption, asking attendees to respect the court's process or watch via Zoom from the hallway.

Two lawyers for the AG's office appeared in person, D'Agostino and David Houska. On behalf of St. Joseph Health LLC, the Los Angeles-based law firm Manatt, Phelps and Phillips LLP sent Harvey Rochman and another attorney to present the hospital's case.

Lead attorney Rochman argued that the hospital is bound by Catholic religious canons as well as California state law, asserting that the prior agreement failed to include the Ethical and Religious Directives (ERD) by which contracted healthcare staff are bound. "Providence operates as part of the healing mission of Jesus Christ," Rochman said, contending that the hospital's religious principles only allow for abortion services in emergency life or death circumstances.

However, the Catholic ERD cited by

Providence St. Joseph, it reads, "Abortion ... is never permitted." The hospital also contended that the Emergency Services Law does not specifically require abortion as emergency health care and that Nusslock's life was not immediately at risk, according to her attending physician.

The AG's team also addressed the medical circumstances of Nusslock's case, noting that by the time she arrived at Mad River Hospital, she was "hemorrhaging at an alarming rate," in stark contrast to St. Joseph Hospital's characterization that she was "stable" when she was assessed in Eureka.

Rochman also argued that the agreement oversteps California law by asking more of the hospital than legally required, despite having voluntarily signed the agreement rather than proceeding with litigation. Here, he cited Bishop Robert Vasa of the Santa Rosa Diocese, who "reviewed the Stipulation after it was entered and determined that the Stipulation violates the ERDs and must be modified."

State attorneys argued that the hospital's ERDs were not incorporated into the original stipulation and therefore cannot be used to justify refusing emergency care. D'Agostino explained that the state took the hospital at its word, and having had an agreement and court order in place, the AG's office saw no need for continuing litigation against the hospital.

Canning questioned both sides about whether the stipulation's lack of an end date was purposeful and whether there had been any factual changes that would justify modifying the agreement. D'Agostino confirmed it was the AG's office intent to have the stipulated agreement be enforceable even after a trial, adding, "the stipulation is enforceable as written."

The AG's attorneys argued that the hospital must comply with the stipulation as written. "People are entitled to the benefit of their agreement," D'Agostino said, emphasizing that the original order was designed to ensure patients in Humboldt County receive necessary emergency care. ●

Workers Over Billionaires Protest in Eureka

By Mark Larson

Despite the apparent lack of much advance publicity and competing Labor Day events, an estimated 1,000 Workers Over Billionaires protestors gathered peacefully on both sides of the street outside the Humboldt County Courthouse in Eureka on Monday. The local protest in opposition to the Trump administration's actions, including those affecting workers, was one of hundreds of 50501 protests that occurred nationwide. (50501 is a grassroots movement, and all local events are organized by independent volunteers.)

Many protesters carried signs linking the labor movement with their protests about actions of the current Trump administration and Project 2025. Elizabeth Kemper's handmade sign with the message "Yes We Can Put Workers Over Billionaires" expanded on the iconic World War II era "We Can Do It" poster that still serves as a symbol for women's rights in the workforce.

M. Clark brought her sign bearing a painting by Tim Okamura of a Black woman in the role of the "We Can Do It" poster.

Another protester named Nina offered a history lesson about how Labor Day emerged in the U.S. and how unions have helped bring about eight-hour days and eliminate child labor while holding her "Labor Day Across Humboldt" sign emblazoned with "Workers Over Billionaires" and "No Dictators in America" messages.

Pat Kansler, of Eureka, arrived early at the corner of Fifth and I streets with a handmade banner that read, "We Are All Under the Boot." "People don't realize the military industrial complex is running this country," she said. Helping Kansler hold her sign was retired teacher Allan Edwards, of McKinleyville, who asked, "Where are the young people?"

Later, a group of four under-30 protesters named Morgan, Liam, Zaya and Matthew were standing on the courthouse steps holding protest signs. Asked Edwards' question, they responded that they'd heard about the protests late and that perhaps the information wasn't in the form of media they consume. They said collectively they had previously only attended the local National Park Service protest, where they had known some of the NPS employees.

"Perhaps many young people around here are from out of town and don't identify with local community events like this," Matthew said.

Local poet Jerry Martien also showed up early at Monday's protest and said, "I've been writing 40 years of protest poetry to encourage more rabble-rousing participation." He'll be reading some of his protest poems at the Arcata Playhouse on Sept. 11.

The first 50501 protest on Feb. 5 started with the idea of 50 protests in 50 states on one day but quickly grew into 80 peaceful protests in all 50 states. Since then, national protests have followed on Feb. 17, March 4, April 5, April 19, May 1, June 14, July 4, July 17 and Aug. 2. The next planned 50501 protest and march, Stop the Trump Takeover, will be centered in Malcolm X Park in Washington, D.C. at 11 a.m. on Saturday, Sept. 6. THE GRAND JURY REPORTS

By Kimberly Wear
kim@northcoastjournal.com

Wielding the power of the subpoena and carrying a mandate enshrined in the state Constitution to serve as overseers of local government, a group of volunteers comes together each year to constitute the Humboldt County Civil Grand Jury.

During their service, the 19 members spend months conducting interviews, making on-site visits and reviewing documents as a part of investigations that delve deep into the inner workings of public agencies, boards and facilities to identify issues and offer solutions in the form of findings and recommendations.

As the civil grand jury release on this year's reports notes, the county residents are appointed by the Humboldt County Superior Court to act as "watchdogs" in a civilian oversight tradition that dates back to the Magna Carta.

The nine reports released in July cover a wide range of topics, including: conditions at the Sempervirens Psychiatric Health Facility, areas with potential "critical choke points" in case of a life-threatening disaster, life-saving "paw-tnerships" between the Humboldt Animal Shelter and rescue networks, and the success of an inmate voting program in the jail.

The longest (35 pages) details a list of inadequacies that employees in offices of the Public Defender and Conflict Counsel face while fulfilling an often underappreciated — and sometimes dangerous — but vital role in upholding the very foundation of the justice system.

Under state law, the civil grand jury release explains, the Humboldt County Board of Supervisors "must respond" to the reports within 90 days "in most cases," stating "each report details required responses and response deadlines."

Here's a quick look at a cross-section of those reports and the accompanying recommendations.

Scales of Justice Out of Balance?

The report focusing on the Public Defender's Office and its independent arm, the Conflict Counsel's Office, found that despite significant obstacles, the attorneys and staff are dedicated to their charge of representing those who cannot afford to provide for their own defense.

Those hindrances, according to the report, include being underfunded, understaffed and under-resourced when compared to the district attorney's office, which has a budget that exceeds funding to the Public Defender's Office by $3.5 million, or 36 percent.

In addition, support staff are paid "at least 25 percent less" than their DA's office counterparts while attorneys in all three offices are compensated at some of the lowest levels in the state, even against similarly sized counties, according to the report.

"The Public Defender and Conflict Counsel's caseloads are dangerously high, far exceeding recommended caseload levels," the report says, noting each attorney is performing the equivalent work of 2.5 attorneys based on recommendations from the Office of the State Public Defender in representing about 80 percent of the county's defendants. "This puts justice, equity, fairness, adequacy of representation, freedom and even lives, at risk in addition to causing serious occupational stress to staff."

While everyone from support staff to attorneys take pride in their work, the report notes interviews revealed "burnout and secondary traumatic stress is extreme," especially when combined with the myriad inequities they face.

Those include, specifically in the case of the Public Defender's Office, an "inadequately maintained, infested, sometimes leaking, dilapidated" workplace without security features, with the civil grand jury noting there "have been rare attacks on staff" and "the lack of physical barriers to provide protection from volatile and violent clients adds to staff stress."

Other morale issues are also contributing to the staff's "sense of having 'no light at the end of the tunnel,'" according to the report, include "the lack of opportunity for advancement, the feeling that you are leaving your team in a bind when taking vacation or even a break, the lack of resources, and the slim chance of ever getting either more staff or better wages."

"These defenders of justice are disadvantaged, deluged and devalued. They all work stressful jobs, in a demoralizing, decrepit environment, with too few staff, not enough money, little opportunity for advancement, and no hope of relief. Is there equity in our local judicial system? There is not," the report concludes.

"The one and only advantage the Public Defender's Office has is its quality, highly skilled and dedicated staff. Pitted against a Goliath, these Davids are winning battles."

Places for improvement recommended by the grand jury on the offices' front include creating a training policy and materials for newly hired attorneys and investigators by the beginning of the year, and "to create and implement a plan to coordinate management of investigations" by Dec. 1.

The recommendations for the county are mainly focused on eliminating the disparities discussed in the report, including raising salaries for positions across the board, providing a new workspace for the Public Defender's Office by next summer and a security upgrade in the interim, approving funds for 12 additional positions — including three full-time attorneys — and approving a policy to permit "emotional support dogs" in the offices until "the county makes proactive counseling to prevent burnout and other stress relief available."

Sempervirens Psychiatric Health Facility: A Key Support System for Humboldt County

Similarly, the report on Sempervirens found building conditions and staffing issues in its look at the region's only "locked-inpatient psychiatric hospital," stating "critical structural deficiencies" in the 120-year-old building "now threaten both SV's operational license and its continued existence."

The civil grand jury notes the county's Department of Health and Human Services "received a $45.3 million grant to build a new Psychiatric Health Facility," which is expected to be completed by 2030.

On the staffing issue, the civil grand jury reports the "medical staff is often under severe strain," due to the hospital being "understaffed, with several unfilled positions, including the key one of a Behavioral Health medical director" for more than a year.

While the "growing nationwide shortage of (and enormous demand for) psychiatrists" is part of the problem, the report states the grand jury "learned from several sources that the county often takes three to six months to complete the hiring process and, by that time, the interested professional applicants often have moved on and sought other positions."

Humboldt's overall low pay-scale and lack of housing were also cited as factors limiting recruitment.

"Sempervirens has some good points, including a strong focus on the well-being and recovery of its patients," the conclusion states. "SV also has a serious need for new facilities and more local professional staff in order to provide quality patient care."

The recommendations include making immediate repairs to a leaky roof that leaves "the crisis unit unusable anytime it rains," streamlining the hiring process by the end of the year and filling any vacant positions as soon as possible.

Humboldt County Animal Shelter: Animal Shelter + Animal Rescues = Lifesaving Paw-tnership

Even amid the barks and meows, the grand jury finds the "real hum of activity" at the McKinleyville facility "centers around the volunteers" who play an integral role alongside the dedicated staff members in giving the animals housed there a new lease on life and a safe place to stay. (Visit northcoastjjournal.com to see a slideshow of some of the adoptable animals at the shelter.)

"They provide walks, enrichment and training for the animals," the report says. "Organization boards with the animals' names are posted for volunteers to refer to with suggested activities and buddy walks. While this is a huge undertaking, it's only the tip of the rescue efforts. A wide-ranging animal rescue network, that often reaches other counties and states, works to lessen the number of 'deemed unadoptable' animals."

The report notes the shelter's ability to maintain a "low rate of euthanasia even though an increasingly large number of homeless animals stretches shelter capacity to the limit ... is due in no small part to the work of the incredible animal rescue network that supports the shelter."

"The animal shelter has had 3,117 adoptions over the past five years. Add another 1,509 animals transferred to the animal rescue network and the total number of saved animals increases significantly," the report states. "Collaboration between the animal shelter and the animal rescue network means more animals are saved; it means better community education, better care, and more resources for animals."

In a running theme, however, the civil grand jury notes issues "with the roof and lighting have plagued the animal shelter for several years."

"The delay in fixing the roof and outdoor lighting fixtures have created unsafe and unhealthy conditions for the staff, the volunteers and the animals," the report states. "Repairing equipment and replacing the roof would let the shelter shine like the gem it is, representing the efforts of a community government collaboration."

The report's recommendations include continuing the collaboration with the rescue networks and for the board of supervisors to establish April 20 as Volunteer Appreciation Day for all county volunteers, as well as for roof repairs to be completed by Halloween and the lighting by New Year's Eve. In addition, the civil grand jury recommends the shelter immediately establish weekend hours to open new avenues for adoptions.

Built to Burn? Emergency Access Challenges on Humboldt Hill

After the devastating Palisades Fire in January raced through neighborhoods with few options for evacuation on mainly narrow roads, causing traffic jams that saw residents leaving behind their vehicles in an effort to escape, members of the civil grand jury turned their eyes to where that could happen in Humboldt.

The report notes the county's Community Wildfire Protection Plan from 2019 outlined several neighborhoods with only one potential evacuation route in the case of a disaster that "could become critical choke points" during an emergency.

The list includes: Humboldt Hill, Upper Jacoby Creek, Liscomb Hill, the end of Ridgewood Drive, neighborhoods along Mitchell, Mitchell Heights, Spears and Pigeon Point roads, and nearby side streets, as well as "dead-end roads to wildland-urban Interface neighborhoods in the greater Eureka area, and the greater Arcata area."

The report notes the Wildfire Protection Plan outlines two main guidelines for residents living in those kinds of areas: Sign up for the county emergency notification system, known as Humboldt Alert, to make sure they are receiving warnings and "form a local neighborhood fire safety group operating under the auspices of the Humboldt County Fire Safe Council."

The latter, the report notes, can help educate residents about wildfire risks and preparation.

Another possibility, the report states, is to create an additional evacuation route by repurposing "existing utility easements as emergency access roads," pointing to a similar effort done in the Santa Cruz Mountains.

"The Humboldt Bay Community Services District owns multiple easements on Humboldt Hill, and with some additional grading work some of these could potentially be linked up to form an emergency egress route," the report states.

Also noted are requirements that any new developments in the Humboldt Hill area "must include a secondary access road," with that responsibility falling to the developer if one doesn't already exist. As it happens, the grand jury says it has "identified a small, proposed development at the top of Humboldt Hill that may provide a solution."

But that will depend on things moving forward, with the report noting the project has been in the planning stages for a little more than six years.

Regardless, the danger that communities in one-road situations face should a wildfire necessitate evacuations is "serious."

"Citizens need to understand the danger and work together to find solutions," the conclusion states. "The grand jury urges the county to facilitate establishing secondary access. This can be achieved either by using existing utility easements as potential emergency egress roads and/or encouraging the completion of the proposed development at the top of Humboldt Hill. Whether a secondary egress road is built or not, the grand jury urges residents to form local firewise communities and to enroll in emergency alert systems to improve community preparedness."

Other recommendations include that the board of directors of the Humboldt No. 1 Fire Protection "direct" the Humboldt Bay Fire's chief to continue working with Humboldt Hill residents to form a Fire Safe Council and become a firewise community.

In addition, the grand jury states the board of supervisors should immediately start negotiations with private landowners and public utilities to establish easements and emergency access rights in the Humboldt Hill area for evacuation routes, and "direct the Planning and Building Department director and relevant staff to expedite the completion of the latest subdivision plan in order to grant emergency access to Humboldt Hill residents."

Locked Up but Not Locked Out: Inmate Voting Rights in Humboldt County

While the civil grand jury is often focused on finding solutions for problems within local systems, one of this year's reports highlights the success of an inmate voting program in Humboldt County's jail.

The report notes the work done by the Humboldt County Sheriff's Office with the county Elections Office to ensure inmates' rights to cast a ballot were upheld, noting correctional officers "actively encouraged inmates to participate in the November election," and the sheriff's office reported "inmates were excited about being able to vote."

"The grand jury learned that in past elections, only one or two inmates voted," the report states. "During the November 2024 election cycle, 72 inmates participated in the voting process. This number is remarkable. It resulted from improvements employed by county correctional deputies and the Office of Elections."

As far as recommendations, the grand jury had only one: that the elections manual already being prepared by the jail be "approved and adopted" by New Year's Eve, noting the document is important "to preserve and record effective inmate voting procedures for future guidance."

"The Humboldt County Civil Grand Jury commends the county for taking a proactive approach consistent with recent legislative action by the state concerning inmate voting rights," the conclusion states. "Humboldt County could serve as a model for other counties in the state."

In addition to the reports highlighted above, the grand jury also looked at navigating a course forward for the county's Department of Aviation, which saw the abrupt departure of a second director in as many years after that report's publication, conducted a follow up on 2017 recommendations for addressing the county's unfunded accrued pension liabilities, looked at operations of the coroner's office and evaluated the Eel River State prison camp. All of the nine reports can be found on the Humboldt County Civil Grand Jury website (humboldtgov.org/510/Civil-Grand-Jury). ●

The Yangs of Curry Leaf

By Jennifer Fumiko Cahill
jennifer@northcoastjournal.com

When Alexander Yang moved to Humboldt County amid the pandemic lockdown in 2020, he hoped to build his relationship with his mother More Yang, who goes by Wendy and had moved north from Fresno 15 years earlier. For the past couple of years, their plans for Kogiri, a Korean barbecue spot in Arcata, have stalled over permits. Now, with that project still in flux, mother and son are running Curry Leaf (2335 Fourth St., Eureka) and cooking traditional Thai food together.

Born and raised in Fresno amid a large Hmong community, Alex says he has always cooked. Since his father worked the swing shift, after school he was home with his siblings and uncle. "My uncle was a shit cook — I'm so sorry," he laughs out. Feeding everyone came naturally and he fell in love with cooking. On a break from college, he worked at a sushi place called Wasabi that was owned by Korean Americans. There, he learned to make both Japanese and Korean food. Meanwhile, at home he was cooking Italian, French, Korean and the Hmong food he grew up with. He scrapped his plans to return to college and applied for culinary school, eventually graduating from the Institute of Technology in Clovis.

A first-generation Hmong immigrant from Laos, Wendy learned to cook her mother See Yang's recipes. "She always made the house smell so good and made the house feel like a home," she says, making traditional rice and laab, as well as chicken and beef soups. "I came here in 2012 to Humboldt and I left my four kids in Fresno. It's really hard being a single mother and trying to find my way here in Humboldt," she says. In 2020, she asked Alex to join her and they started to talk about opening a restaurant, "something that will last."

Alex had worked in a few kitchens and helped open Lily's Thai Kitchen in Willow Creek with Vongdeun "Lily" Phongpaseuth, Wendy's "sister from a different mother" whom he calls "Auntie" and is "one of the best chefs I've ever worked with." That was in 2021 and he recalls snow stranding people but bringing in crowds of hungry Caltrans workers.

Soon plans were underway for Kogiri, but every permit that went through seemed to breed more requirements from the city of Arcata, Alex says. The tabletop grills, still to be properly installed, are visible through the windows, prompting questions about when it's going to open. But now the family is considering whether buying the building would make things easier, even if slower.

Alex says he worked at Plaza Grill, Rooftop and even Taco Bell in the interim. "It might just be the ADHD in me, but I was waiting for permits to happen," and he couldn't "sit still." The stint in fast food, he says, was instructive in terms of learning management and consistency, especially under pressure.

Then Joe Tan, who had been trying to sell his pan-Asian restaurant Curry Leaf, made him an offer too sweet to walk away from. "I was like, 'Bro, why would you do this to me?'" he says, with a sigh and a chuckle. "He broke me down."

The Yang family took over Curry Leaf in May, and a banner declaring its new management still hangs over the entrance to the large dining room that was once home to the Gonsea Chinese Restaurant. Phongpaseuth helped with the menu and joined them in the kitchen along with Alex's brother Arthur Yang.

"We're Thai food but our name still has Asian fusion in it," says Alex, "And I can be as creative as possible there." When things settle, he hopes to do a chef's table with fine dining course sets.

"My mom has almost no restaurant experience but she is a great home cook," says Alex. He admits sometimes they butt heads in the kitchen, and teaching her professional kitchen protocols sometimes means a reversal of their dynamic. "There's always that heat, like, 'Sorry, I didn't mean what I said when we were in a rush.'" He laughs and says, "I feel like our relationship is deepening as we yell at each other. ... It's more fun than it is frustrating."

Wendy says, "Sometimes it's tough because he's young. But he's working really hard ... and learning at the same time." Seeing him put in 16-hour days, she says, "I give him a lot of credit." Not that she's going to let him win every time. "I grew up more in a traditional way and he went to school, and he has to do everything by the book. He's too Americanized and I'm more traditional, so sometimes he doesn't want to use some ingredients," she says. "Sometimes he win, sometimes I win."

"I lived in Thailand for about 10 years, and I love traveling so I've been in and out of Thailand for the last few years," she says. It's important to her that the flavor profiles of classic Thai dishes like laab and tom yum goong are traditional, with galangal, lemongrass, chiles, lime leaf and mint. Cooking in a professional kitchen, she says, she's developed a new appreciation for the work of sourcing ingredients at a restaurant. "Sometimes you just go eat pho, but you don't appreciate all the ingredients that go into it."

The result is a springy pad Thai ($18) that offers mild sweetness along with the tang of tamarind and a pad ka pow with tender, knife-minced beef and heady doses of Thai basil chiles and garlic ($20). The wide fried rice noodles in the pad see ew ($20) are wonderfully smoky with wok hei and soy sauce.

"I wanted to make it more like homemade, to make something different," says Wendy, who adds making sauces from scratch is worth the extra effort.

On that score, mother and son agree. ●

What the Constitution Means to Redwood Curtain Theatre

By Jennifer Fumiko Cahill
jennifer@northcoastjournal.com

In the 5th and D Street Theatre, Natasha Samuelsen stands in the spotlight explaining the tenets of the 14th Amendment to the five people sitting in the dark during dress rehearsal. As the main character in Heidi Schreck's What the Constitution Means to Me, she enthuses over the enshrining of naturalized citizenship with the hard smile of a 15 year old, inhabiting the playwright's first-person account of delivering speeches about the Constitution as part of a scholarship program. Her toothy rigor slips at the caveats about the women and Native people left out of the language and the abuses of the Chinese Exclusion Act, and her youthful enthusiasm drops as she recounts the grim stories of the abuse women in Schreck's family faced.

Outside the theater, the 14th Amendment is on even shakier ground: Due process, naturalized citizenship and the right to privacy that was the bedrock of the right to choose to terminate a pregnancy are all under attack by the Trump administration.

One of the handful of people in the theater is director Peggy Metzger. When the board of the Redwood Curtain Theatre reads through prospective plays, she explains, "What we look for in a script are stories that have never been told," at least locally or on screen, especially those from marginalized communities. What the Constitution Means to Me speaks explicitly to the legal subjugation of and violence against women, particularly the author's mother's experiences in an abusive home and the scant protection our laws have given women and minorities. But the play, written in response to the first Trump presidency, was not a shoe-in.

Metzger says that when her collaborators were making their choices, they believed Kamala Harris would be the next president. With a dark laugh, she says they didn't foresee how endangered the Constitution would be or how many of the edits they would make — statistics and U.S. Supreme Court decisions for which the author has made allowances for updates — would be about the erosion of our rights, like the overturning of Roe v. Wade, and the worsening violence against women. "You can't not address the fact that's changed."

And yet, she says, the show is ultimately hopeful. When she says it is "encouraging, I mean 'to give courage.'"

Once it was on the schedule, Metzger knew Samuelsen, with whom she's worked on and off for 35 years, was the woman for the job. "It is almost a one-woman show," Metzger says, noting the main character is joined only by the timekeeping Legionnaire (William English III) at stage right and a high school debater (Brooklyn Burns) who comes on stage in the second act. Most of the 90 minutes is monologue that swings between humor, nerdy charm and gut-punching intensity. "It's not something you do unless you have the right actress for the show."

> "It started very personal and as we went through the process, it became more of an act of resistance."
> — Peggy Metzger

Perched on the edge of the stage after rehearsal, Samuelsen explains how she had been avoiding the news and the attendant cycle of rage and hopelessness it tends to pull her into. The show — including reading the script every night to memorize her lines — has brought her back into political conversation. Some of the material is difficult for her to get through without crying, she says, especially the section about Jessica Gonzales, whose abusive husband kidnapped and murdered their three young daughters while police refused to enforce the restraining order she had filed against him. After having read up on the case, she says, "It's so much worse."

Still, Samuelsen says, "I haven't left [rehearsals] sad. It's been empowering to be with mostly strong women but one gentle, kind man." She sends a smile to English, who pinkens a little. Metzger, she says, announced early on that a main priority was to make Samuelsen safe, a goal her castmates and crew seconded.

"The words I say, I agree with them," Samuelsen says of Schreck's script, "and wish I was smart enough to say them."

English, too, feels an affinity for his role and both the toxic and positive role models of masculinity his character addresses in a monologue. "Some of those things ... I feel like I've experienced as well," he says, adding he appreciates that Schreck leaves the conclusion "open ended."

Sixteen-year-old Brooklyn Burns of Eureka High School's debate team, seated between Samuelsen and English, crosses her Converse high tops and explains how entrenched in politics she feels as a girl with friends who are trans. She says she finds herself relating to Schreck's stories as she navigates growing up while worrying about her own safety in a way her brother and male friends don't have to, whether walking to her car or being at home alone. "It's become just so normal that girls can't do things alone," she says, without the safety of numbers or an accompanying male.

"This play does mean a lot to me. I know this could seem boring for us as teenagers," Burns says, but she hopes her friends will give it a chance and connect to it as she did, maybe have some important conversations.

"It's been really an interesting journey for me. ... We did a lot of just talking," Metzger says, with the cast members reading and sharing their own experiences. "It started very personal and as we went through the process, it became more of an act of resistance." That political turn is a natural one for theater, she says, part of its history and societal function, as when Berthold Brecht and Vàclav Havel wrote under authoritarian regimes. "Theater is protest because it's a whole bunch of people in a room together in solidarity about these issues," she says, "but also entertainment."

Metzger, who was at the Humboldt County Courthouse for the Labor Day 50501 Workers Over Billionaires protest against the Trump administration earlier in the day, says a friend recently asked her what she thought such protests accomplish. It's similar, she says, to what theater has historically offered against authoritarianism.

"It gives us courage to speak out," says Metzger, "If I see other people speaking out, it gives me courage."

Arcata picks up the Friday Night Market torch passed from Eureka, which had its final market of the season last week, kicking off the Arcata Friday Night Market on Friday, Sept. 5 from 5 to 8 p.m. at the Arcata Plaza (free). This series of Friday night markets, brought to you by Humboldt Made — the folks behind the popular Eureka event — runs Sept. 5, 12 and 26 (pausing during the weekend of the North Country Fair) and will be much like the Eureka one, only on a smaller scale. This Friday night, you'll find the plaza and streets around it filled with vendors, food trucks, farmers, makers, artists and more. There's the Humboldt Made Bar featuring local breweries, wineries and distilleries, live music by The Undercovers, a Cal Poly Humboldt student welcome area, family activities and much more. See you there!

Eureka turns one city block into an all-day arts-and-neighbors celebration with its Block Party on F St., on Saturday, Sept. 6, from noon to 9 p.m. (free). The action takes place between Sixth and Seventh streets near the Eureka Theater. Explore 30 booths of art, catch tribal performers and four live bands, and pop into two galleries along the route (Morris Graves Museum of Art and Redwood Art Association). Fuel up on fry bread, pizza, sushi, ice cream and more, with beer and wine pouring nearby. Kids can create and play in the Discovery Museum's hosted zone, while face painters and fire dancers keep the spectacle going into evening. Sponsored by Eureka Cultural Arts District, United Indian Health Services, Humboldt Arts Council and Redwood Art Association, this all-day/night event coincides with September's Arts Alive.

A Return to Messy Heroes

Caught Stealing and The Toxic Avenger

By John J. Bennett
screens@northcoastjournal.com

CAUGHT STEALING. For a quarter century (give or take) Darren Aronofsky has had me chasing the dragon of what he can do. The challenge inherent in this, of course, is that the thing I want him to do, what I see as his high-water mark, rarely coincides with what he wants to do. Requiem for a Dream (2000), his follow-up to the quietly admired Pi (1998), shattered a lot of limitations present even in the wide-open landscape of the '90s indie film revolution. Jarring, colorful, endlessly inventive in both its technical execution and in its granular depiction of the great wage demanded by chronic loneliness and addiction, Requiem lives on a lot of lists of "movies I can only see once." As a person of a certain age and temperament then, I found a cracked, probably inappropriate solace in such work; I've made progress. But I maintain that those first two Aronofskys are revolutionary: They announced the arrival of a thorny, honest, sometimes too-heady voice to American cinema.

Since then, it's been a mixed bag. The work is always interesting and not infrequently fascinating, but, from the perspective of the audience, it can also tend toward the inscrutable and overreaching. Still, everything that bears the mark is a work of substance, of genuine creative and intellectual exploration and significant investment in the tradecraft of filmmaking. The whole catalog is best revisited and relitigated another time, and I wouldn't want to damn the lesser entries with faint praise (well, not exactly), but Caught Stealing is the first Aronofsky in a long time to recapture the kineticism and grime and pathos that I found so fascinating and delicious in the early days.

Written by Charlie Huston (adapting his own novel), shot by longtime accomplice Matthew Libatique (another big year for Matty!) and set in the still-grimy-despite-Giuliani Lower East Side of 1998, Caught Stealing centers on Hank Thompson (Austin Butler), a one-time Bay Area baseball phenom turned bartender and semi-professional boozer. One unfortunate afternoon, Hank's neighbor Russ (Matt Smith), a walking anachronism/wannabe Sex Pistol, briskly asks Hank to watch his cat, as he needs to fly back to London to be with his ailing father. Soon enough, some bone-breaking Russians, a couple of murderous Hasid brothers, and a police detective are all knocking on Hank's door (and various parts of his body) to get at something Russ has obviously concealed from them all.

What follows is one of those deceptively difficult, thereby increasingly rare, caper movies that, handled ineptly or even indelicately, becomes a straight-to-video joke about its own cliches. But in the hands of this capable crew and crazy, sexy, going-for-broke cast, abetted by IDLES' note-perfect original soundtrack, it grows beyond the boundaries of simple genre. Precariously balancing near-slapstick comedy with real-world violence and consequences, Caught Stealing harnesses a type of energy that is all too rare. And it manages to kinda-sorta wink at us (and itself) while simultaneously demonstrating what it means when mayhem touches down in your life. R. 107M. BROADWAY.

THE TOXIC AVENGER. The 1984 original version lives in my memory as seen through a kaleidoscope, bits and pieces and notions half-remembered from afternoon airings on the Turner networks. While I can't say I'm among the faithful, I'm nerd-splatter adjacent enough to appreciate it and the market-share Troma Entertainment carved out for itself. And all these decades later, I'm close enough to the fray to have been aware of Macon Blair's long-gestating and reputedly shelved reboot for a couple years. Now it is upon us.

In a city riven by the toxic output of the "health" company infecting its very heart, custodian Winston Gooze (Peter Dinklage) struggles to raise an emotionally troubled stepson (Jacob Tremblay) after the death of the boy's mother. Because he doesn't have enough on his plate, Winston's health becomes a pressing issue and, when he makes a rash decision to do something about it, he falls in the crosshairs of his corporate overlord and its maniacal, bumbling internal security. Add a mop, some bullet-wounds and a couple of different strains of odious goo, and, voila: Toxie is born again.

Summer's over; Feral Cat Fall has begun.
Caught Stealing

Because horror remains a vibrant and viable branch of the movie business, Blair's weird-on-weird tribute to Lloyd Kaufman, gross-out comedy and underdogs at large can now see the light of day. And while it is most certainly not for all tastes (some would say only for the tasteless), it is a glorious and ridiculous thing to behold. Embracing the low-rent, handmade tenets of Troma's origins (and really all American independent cinema), The Toxic Avenger is brave enough to dare us to laugh at its "flaws" and to defy us not to embrace them by the time the end-credits roll. Causing Ferment in the Kitchen

While the cold spring weather this year delayed growth of the vegetable plants in my garden, I am finally getting enough cabbage, garlic and radish to start making kimchi. Like yogurt and kombucha, kimchi, a fermented vegetable dish and staple of the Korean diet, has been enthusiastically adopted in the U.S. and is commonly carried in grocery stores.

Vegetable fermentation probably originated in areas of China, where short summers and long winters meant that food preservation was necessary for people to survive the cold months. It later spread to similar climate zones such as Northern Europe and Korea. Cabbage-based ferments like kimchi and sauerkraut are probiotic and nutrient dense. Like many dishes that come to the U.S. from around the world, much of the kimchi here has been "Americanized" to fit our own tastes. In Korea, kimchi ranges from the simple to the highly seasoned and complex, and since I had long been making sauerkraut with just salt and cabbage, the simple way sounded like a good place to start.

The first book I read on kimchi included its history, the science behind it and many recipes from Korea. Kimchi: A Korean Health Food was written by two nutrition and food scientists, Helen C. Lee and Florence C. Lee. I started fermenting cabbage and radish, making my first batch of kimchi with their guidance about 20 years ago.

Want to try your hand at making kimchi? The dish always starts with raw cruciferous vegetables like cabbage and Korean or Japanese radish. Most kimchi recipes call for napa cabbage, which has tender leaves and a mild taste, while sauerkraut is made with green or red cabbage, which I prefer in both kimchi and sauerkraut for their crunch and mouthfeel. I have also used broccoli, brussels sprouts, and cauliflower as main ingredients in kimchi. My favorite radish for kimchi is Alpine, a Korean variety, though many recipes use daikon radish. Compared to daikon, Alpine has a denser, firmer texture and a strong peppery, spicy flavor. Whichever vegetables you use, they should be chopped or grated into consistently sized pieces to encourage an even fermentation rate.

You will also need garlic and gochugaru (Korean red chili flakes) to help give this fermented dish its unique combination of sour, umami and spicy flavors. Other common ingredients include fresh ginger, green onion, Asian pear and dried shrimp.

Salt is critical in both kimchi and sauerkraut. The salt draws out water and sugars from the vegetables, and then lactic acid bacteria and fungi feed on the vegetable juices. There is no need to add a culture — the lactic acid bacteria and other organisms are already on the vegetables. Mix all your ingredients together and pack them into a clean container (preferably made of glass or another nonreactive material). Use pickling salt to make a 3 percent saltwater solution and pour it over the ingredients in the jar. The vegetables must be covered by the salt solution to prevent bad bacteria from spoiling them. Cover the container but let the fermenting gases escape. Several local stores sell fermentation containers that provide a good lid seal while still allowing gas to diffuse out.

After four to 10 days, the gases from fermentation of green cabbage create a sulphurous odor best kept in the garage. However, some other vegetable ferments do not raise such a stink. I normally let my kimchi ferment for three to four weeks. The longer it ferments, the sourer it gets. You can start tasting your kimchi during the first week. When it tastes good to you, refrigerate it to stop the fermentation process and enjoy. ●

PROPERTY TAX DEFAULT (DELINQUENT) LIST

I, Amy Christensen, Humboldt County Tax Collector, State of California, certify that:

The real properties listed below were declared to be in tax default at 12:01 a.m. on July 1, 2022, by operation of law pursuant to Revenue and Taxation Code §3436. The declaration of default was due to nonpayment of the total amount due for the taxes, assessments, and other charges levied in fiscal year 2021-2022 that were a lien on the listed real property.

Tax-defaulted real property may be redeemed by payment of all unpaid taxes and assessments, together with the additional penalties and fees, as prescribed by law, or it may be redeemed under an installment plan of redemption.

The amount to redeem, including all penalties and fees, as of September 2025, is shown opposite the parcel number and next to the name of the assessee.

All information concerning redemption of tax-defaulted property will be furnished, upon request, by Amy Christensen 825 5th St Room 125 Eureka, CA 95501. (707)476-2450.

PARCEL NUMBERING SYSTEM EXPLANATION

The Assessor's Parcel Number (APN), when used to describe property in this list, refers to the assessor's map book, the map page, the block on the map (if applicable), and the individual parcel on the map page or in the block. The assessor's maps and further explanation of the parcel numbering system are available in the assessor's office.

SUMMONS (FAMILY LAW)CASE NUMBER: FL2500473

NOTICE TO RESPONDENT: Chad Victor Knuth
You have been sued. Read the information below.
PETITIONER'S NAME IS:
Chelsie Bishop
You have 30 calendar days after this Summons and Petition are served on you to file a Response (form FL-120 or FL-123) at the court and have a copy served on the petitioner. A letter, phone call or court appearance will not protect you.
If you do not file your Response on time, the court may make orders affecting your marriage or domestic partnership, your property, and custody of your children. You may be ordered to pay support and attorney fees and costs.
For legal advice, contact a lawyer immediately. Get help finding a lawyer at the California Courts Online Self-Help Center (www.courts.ca.gov/selfhelp), at the California Legal Services website or by contacting your local county bar association.
NOTICE-RESTRAINING ORDERS ARE ON PAGE 2:
These restraining orders are effective against both spouses or domestic partners until the petition is dismissed, a judgment is entered, or the court makes further orders. They are enforceable anywhere in California by any law enforcement officer who has received or seen a copy of them.
FEE WAIVER: If you cannot pay the filing fee, ask the clerk for a fee waiver form. The court may order you to pay back all or part of the fees and costs that the court waived for you or the other party.
The name and address of the court are:
Superior Court of California,
County of Humboldt
825 5th Street
Eureka, CA 95501
The name, address, and telephone number of the petitioner's attorney, or the petitioner without an attorney, are:
Laurence S. Ross, OWENS & Ross
1118 Sixth Street
Erueka, CA 95501
(707) 441-1185
Date: July 3, 2025 clerk, by Carlos Meara Hattan, Deputy STANDARD FAMILY LAW RESTRAINING ORDERS
Starting immediately, you and your spouse or domestic partner are restrained from:
• Removing the minor children of the parties from the state or applying for a new or replacement passport for those minor children without the prior written consent of the other party or an order of the court;
• Cashing, borrowing against, canceling, transferring, disposing of, or changing the beneficiaries of any insurance or other coverage, including life, health, automobile, and disability, held for the benefit of the parties and their minor children;
• Transferring, encumbering, hypothecating, concealing, or in any way disposing of any way disposing of any property, real or personal, whether community, quasi-community, or separate, without the written consent of the other party or an order of the court, except in the usual course of business or for the necessities of life; and
• Creating a nonprobate transfer or modifying a nonprobate transfer in a manner that affects the disposition of property subject to the transfer, without the written consent of the other party or an order of the court. Before revocation of a nonprobate transfer can take effect or a right of survivorship to property can be eliminated, notice of the change must be filed and served on the other party.
You must notify each other of any proposed extraordinary expenditures at least five business days prior to incurring these extraordinary expenditures and account to the court for all extraordinary expenditures made after these restraining orders are effective. However, you may use community property, quasi-community property, or your own separate property to pay an attorney to help you or to pay court costs.
NOTICE-ACCESS TO AFFORDABLE HEALTH INSURANCE: Do you or someone in your household need affordable health insurance? If so, you should apply for Covered California. Covered California can help reduce the cost you pay towards high quality affordable health care. For more information, visit www.coveredca.com. Or call Covered California at 1-800-300-1506.
WARNING-IMPORTAN INFORMATION California law provides that, for purposes of division of property upon dissolution of a marriage or domestic partnership or upon legal separation, property acquired by the parties during marriage or domestic partnership or upon legal separation, property acquired by the parties during marriage or domestic partnership in joint form is presumed to be community property. If either party to this action should die before the jointly held community property is divided, the language in the deed that characterizes how title is held (i.e., joint tenancy, tenants in common, or community property) will be controlling, and not the community property presumption. You should consult your attorney if you want the community property presumption to be written into the recorded title to the property.

SUMMONS - EVICTION (CITATION JUDICIAL) CASE NUMBER: CV2501481

NOTICE TO Defendant: Markeith Perry (AKA Redd); Does 1 to 10
You are being sued by Plaintiff: Bryce McCurdy
NOTICE! You have been sued. The court may decide against you without your being heard unless you respond within 10 days. You have 10 DAYS, not counting Saturdays and Sundays and other judicial holidays, after this summons and legal papers are served on you to file a written response at this court and have a copy served on the plaintiff.
If this summons was served through the Secretary of State's Safe at Home address confidentiality program, you have 15 days from the date of service, not counting Saturdays and Sundays and other judicial holidays, to respond.
A letter or phone call will not protect you. Your written response must be in proper legal form if you want the court to hear your case. There may be a court form that you can use for your response. You can find these court forms and more information at the Self-Help Guide to California Courts (https://selfhelp.courts.ca.gov), your county law library, or the courthouse nearest you. If you do not file your response on time you may lose the case by default, and your wages, money, and property may be taken without further warning from the court.
There are other legal requirements. You may want to call an attorney right away. If you do not know an attorney, you may want to call an attorney referral service. If you cannot afford an attorney, you may be eligible for free legal services from a nonprofit legal services program. You can locate these nonprofit groups at the California Legal Services Web site (www.lawhelpca.org), the Self-Help Guide to the California Courts (https://selfhelp.courts.ca.gov) or by contacting your local court or county bar association.
FEE WAIVER: If you cannot pay the filing fee, ask the clerk for a fee waiver form. NOTE: The court has a statutory lien for waived fees and costs on any settlement or arbitration award of $10,000 or more in a civil case. The court's lien must be paid before the court will dismiss the case.
The name and address of the court is:

UNLESS YOU TAKE ACTION TO PROTECT YOUR PROPERTY, IT MAY BE SOLD AT A PUBLIC SALE. IF YOU NEED AN EXPLANATION OF THE NATURE OF THE PROCEEDING AGAINST YOU, YOU SHOULD CONTACT A LAWYER. A public auction sale of the Trustor's interest will be made to the highest bidder for lawful money of the United States, payable at the time of sale in cash, cashier's check drawn on a state or national bank, cashier's check drawn by a state or federal credit union, or a cashier's check drawn by a state or federal savings and loan association, or savings association, or savings bank specified in Section 5102 of the Financial Code and authorized to do business in this state will be held by the duly appointed trustee as shown below, of all right, title, and interest conveyed to and now held by the trustee in the hereinafter described property under and pursuant to a Deed of Trust described below. The sale will be made, but without covenant or warranty, expressed or implied, regarding title, possession, or encumbrances, to pay the remaining principal sum of the note(s) secured by the Deed of Trust, with interest and late charges thereon, as provided in the note(s), advances, under the terms of the Deed of Trust, interest thereon, fees, charges and expenses of the Trustee for the total amount (at the time of the initial publication of the Notice of Sale) reasonably estimated to be set forth below. The amount may be greater on the day of sale. Trustor: REBECCA L. ARCOS AND ERIC E. ARCOS, WIFE AND HUSBAND Duly Appointed Trustee: PLM LOAN MANAGEMENT SERVICES, INC. Recorded 10/9/2012, as Instrument No. 2012-025048-13, of Official Records in the office of the Recorder of Humboldt County, California, Date of Sale: 9/18/2025 at 11:00 AM Place of Sale: At the front entrance to the County Courthouse at 825 5th Street, Eureka, CA 95501 Amount of unpaid balance and other charges: $93,547.80 (estimated as of the first publication date) Street Address or other common designation of real property: 20 OAKRIDGE DRIVE REDWAY, CA 95560 The undersigned Trustee disclaims any liability for any incorrectness of the street address or other common designation, if any, shown above. The property heretofore described is being sold "as is". If the Trustee is unable to convey title for any reason, the successful bidder's sole and exclusive remedy shall be the return of monies paid to the Trustee, and the successful bidder shall have no further recourse. If no street address or other common designation is shown, directions to the location of the property may be obtained by sending a written request to the beneficiary within 10 days of the date of first publication of this Notice of Sale. The following statements; NOTICE TO POTENTIAL BIDDERS and NOTICE TO PROPERTY OWNER are statutory notices for all one to four single family residences and a courtesy notice for all other types of properties. NOTICE TO POTENTIAL BIDDERS: If you are considering bidding on this property lien, you should understand that there are risks involved in bidding at a trustee auction. You will be bidding on a lien, not on the property itself. Placing the highest bid at a trustee auction does not automatically entitle you to free and clear ownership of the property. You should also be aware that the lien being auctioned off may be a junior lien. If you are the highest bidder at the auction, you are or may be responsible for paying off all liens senior to the lien being auctioned off, before you can receive clear title to the property. You are encouraged to investigate the existence, priority, and size of outstanding liens that may exist on this property by contacting the county recorder's office or a title insurance company, either of which may charge you a fee for this information. If you consult either of these resources, you should be aware that the same lender may hold more than one mortgage or deed of trust on the property. NOTICE TO PROPERTY OWNER: The sale date shown on this notice of sale may be postponed one or more times by the mortgagee, beneficiary, trustee, or a court, pursuant to Section 2924g of the California Civil Code.

The law requires that information about trustee sale postponements be made available to you and to the public, as a courtesy to those not present at the sale. If you wish to learn whether your sale date has been postponed, and, if applicable, the rescheduled time and date for the sale of this property, you may call (916) 939-0772 or visit this Internet Website http://www.nationwideposting.com/, using the file number assigned to this case 117W-019977. Information about postponements that are very short in duration or that occur close in time to the scheduled sale may not immediately be reflected in the telephone information or on the Internet Website. The best way to verify postponement information is to attend the scheduled sale. NOTICE TO TENANT: You may have a right to purchase this property after the trustee auction pursuant to Section 2924m of the California Civil Code. If you are an "eligible tenant buyer," you can purchase the property if you match the last and highest bid placed at the trustee auction. If you are an "eligible bidder," you may be able to purchase the property if you exceed the last and highest bid placed at the trustee auction. There are three steps to exercising this right of purchase. First, 48 hours after the date of the trustee sale, you can call (916) 939-0772, or visit this internet website http://www.nationwideposting.com/, using the file number assigned to this case 117W-019977 to find the date on which the trustee's sale was held, the amount of the last and highest bid, and the address of the trustee. Second, you must send a written notice of intent to place a bid so that the trustee receives it no more than 15 days after the trustee's sale. Third, you must submit a bid so that the trustee receives it no more than 45 days after the trustee's sale. If you think you may qualify as an "eligible tenant buyer" or "eligible bidder," you should consider contacting an attorney or appropriate real estate professional immediately for advice regarding this potential right to purchase. AMENDED NOTICE OF PETITION TO ADMINISTER ESTATE OF

Michael J. Mangiantini aka Michael Joseph Mangiantini, Michael Mangiantini

CASE NO. PR2500215

To all heirs, beneficiaries, creditors, contingent creditors and persons who may otherwise be interested in the will or estate, or both, of

A PETITION FOR PROBATE has been filed by Petitioner, John R. Mangiantini

In the Superior Court of California, County of Humboldt. The petition for probate requests that John R. Mangiantini be appointed as personal representative to administer the estate of the decedent.

THE PETITION requests authority to administer the estate under the Independent Administration of Estates Act. (This authority will allow the personal representative to take many actions without obtaining court approval. Before taking certain very important actions, however, the personal representative will be required to give notice to interested persons unless they have waived notice or consented to the proposed action.) The independent administration authority will be granted unless an interested person files an objection to the petition and shows good cause why the court should not grant the authority.

A HEARING on the petition will be held on September 18, 2025 at 9:30 a.m. at the Superior Court of California, County of Humboldt, 825 Fifth Street, Eureka, in Dept.: 4

For information on how to appear remotely for your hearing, please visit https://www.humboldt.courts.ca.gov/

IF YOU OBJECT to the granting of the petition, you should appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney.

IF YOU ARE A CREDITOR or a contingent creditor of the decedent, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within the later of either (1) four months from the date of first issuance of letters to a general personal representative, as defined in section 58(b) of the California Probate Code, or (2) 60 days from the date of mailing or personal delivery to you of a notice under section 9052 of the California Probate Code. Other California statutes and legal authority may affect your rights as a creditor. You may want to consult with an attorney knowledgeable in California law.

YOU MAY EXAMINE the file kept by the court. If you are a person interested in the estate, you may file with the court a Request for Special Notice (form DE-154) of the filing of an inventory and appraisal of estate assets or of any petition or account as provided in Probate Code section 1250. A Request for Special Notice form is available from the court clerk.

Terry Lee Clark

September 10, 1958-August 4, 2025

Terry Lee Clark, 66, passed away on Monday, August 4, 2025, in Salina, Kansas. Born September 10, 1958, in Salina, Kansas, to Leonard and Dorothy Clark, Terry graduated from Salina Central High School in 1976, went on to earn his undergraduate degree from Washburn University in 1980, and received his Juris Doctorate from the University of Kansas Law School in 1983. He had a small law office in Salina before embarking on a new chapter in Northern California.

Terry met the love of his life, Linda Cozyris, and moved to Arcata, California, where she lived. They were married in 2000 in St. Alban's church, just down the road from the home they would share for 22 years. Together, they built a warm and loving home nestled in the redwoods of Sunny Brae, surrounded by animals, books, and their love of shared passions. Terry was a devoted animal lover and tireless advocate for animal welfare. Over the years, he and Linda welcomed a menagerie of beloved cats and dogs, including Chow Chows, Shih Tzus, and a host of rescue kitties, into their lives. Terry worked closely with rescue organizations, often helping coordinate safe passage for animals from shelters to loving forever homes.

A voracious reader and lifelong learner, Terry was a fixture at local Friends of the Library sales in Eureka and Arcata, where he loved discovering new reads and rare finds, often coming home with bags full of books. He was also a devoted music enthusiast with an impressive vinyl collection. His love of storytelling extended to comic books (another impressive collection) and science fiction, especially Star Trek, which captured his sense of wonder and hope for a better future.

Terry worked for many years as a law clerk for James Zito in Eureka, California before dedicating himself full-time to caring for Linda as her health declined. He also worked with compassion and patience as a classroom aide for special needs students in local schools, including McKinleyville High, where he made a lasting impact on the lives of the children he supported.

Soft-spoken but fiercely principled, Terry was known for his unwavering kindness, dependable nature, and sharp wit. He was generous with his time and always ready to lend a hand, whether in person or through his active online presence, where he was a well-known voice in many advocacy and interest-based communities. His Substack writings and thoughtful contributions reflected his deep intellect and unshakable sense of justice.

After Linda passed in December 2022, Terry returned to Salina in 2024 and continued giving back to his community as a substitute teacher in local schools. Though the final years of his life were marked by profound loss, his spirit of love, service, and resilience remained undimmed.

He is survived by his sister, Kimberly Clark, of Salina; several cousins; and by his wife's children, Kali, Trevor, and Kristian Cozyris, who will forever remember his steadfast support, humor, and generous heart.

He was preceded in death by his parents and his beloved wife, Linda.

Terry will be laid to rest at Roselawn Memorial Park in Salina.

In honor of Terry's legacy of compassion and advocacy, memorial donations may be made to the family to help with final expenses, or to local animal rescue organizations in his name.

William "Bill" Daley

William "Bill" Daley, a devoted husband, father, and community pillar, passed away peacefully on September 11, 2024.

A proud U.S. Navy veteran, Bill served in Vietnam, where he met his first wife, Thanh. Together, they moved to Fieldbrook, California, where they raised four strong and spirited daughters whom he faithfully supported — cheering them on at school sports, guiding them on backpacking adventures, and always keeping their cars running.

Bill co-owned the Fieldbrook General Store with his brother Ron, creating a welcoming place that became the heart of the town. His lifelong friendship with Ron was a cornerstone of his life; they shared a love of sports, camping, and family holidays. From the early days of running the store to later years attending church and enjoying coffee together, Bill and Ron remained inseparable, merry companions.

Bill and Thanh built a wonderful Fieldbrook community and a warm and loving home that was always open to family, friends, and animals. Her gracious cooking and his endless creative projects made their house a special gathering place filled with laughter. Bill cherished fishing trips and celebrations with dear friends — the Snyder, Sweeney, and Albert families — where he felt happiest surrounded by nature and community.

After Thanh's passing, Bill found renewal in landscaping and building a new life with his second wife, Le. Together, they shared faith, humor, and companionship that brought him joy and comfort.

Bill's love for his community was evident in all he did — from helping families in need to mentoring kids who needed guidance. He had a passion for music, photography, and sports, and he shared those passions through community events like the annual Halloween costume contest and his ever-popular NFL football pool.

Bill is survived by his wife, Le; his daughters, Teri, Lorraine, Marcia, and Holly; his stepson, Ngan; his brother, Ron Daley; his sister-in-law, Shelley Daley; his stepsisters, Rose Parks, Elaine Noonan, and Janet Reid; his niece and nephew, Kelley and Trevor Daley; and his grandchildren Thanah, Emily, Austin and Spence. He was preceded in death by his first wife and mother of his children, Chanh "Thanh" Daley.

Bill will be remembered as a loving father, devoted brother, and beloved member of the Fieldbrook community. His kindness, generosity, and zest for life touched all who knew him, and his legacy will live on in the hearts of family and friends.

A celebration of Bill's life will be held on Friday, September 12, 2025, at the Fieldbrook Winery. In lieu of flowers, donations may be made to the Thanh & Bill Daley Memorial Fund or Karuna Animal Rescue, honoring his spirit of service and compassion. FEATURED LISTING!

8015 KNEELAND ROAD, KNEELAND
$850,000

This breathtaking ±40 acre property boasts a southwest-facing landscape filled with open meadows and undisturbed woodlands stocked with maples and old-growth firs. The custom built 2,400 sq.ft. 3 bedroom, 2 bathroom home offers an inviting atmosphere with vaulted ceilings, beautiful old-growth fir floors, and a cozy wood-burning fireplace. Embrace a sustainable lifestyle with fully off-grid living, equipped with solar power and spring-sourced water. Outside a mature orchard and fully fenced garden area complete the idyllic setting. Located at the end of a private road, this unique property is a true sanctuary, blending comfort, sustainability, and natural beauty.

6795 WEST AVENUE, FIELDS LANDING
$385,000

Tucked in the coastal community of Fields Landing, this 3-bedroom, 1-bath home features a separate 1-bedroom ADU, sunroom, and oversized detached garage/shop. Lovingly cared for by one family for decades, it offers charm, potential, and room to make it your own. The landscaped yard boasts wisteria, roses, maples, and blueberries, with plenty of afternoon sun. Just three blocks from the ocean boat ramp, this property blends comfort, character, and coastal living.

3253 GREENWOOD HEIGHTS DR, KNEELAND
$598,000

Storybook home, located above the fog belt, just a few miles above Freshwater School. Tucked behind a privacy gate and fence, you will find a 3 bed, 2 bath home, sun-drenched decks, planting beds, solarium, detached guest room, recreation room, workshop, corner garden, and a striking redwood grove across the creek below. A reliable well, garage, and additional covered parking areas complete the picture.

3639 GREENWOOD HEIGHTS DRIVE, KNEELAND
$399,000

Escape to 5+ acres of peaceful Greenwood Heights living, nestled among mature Redwoods with flat usable land, a corral, and merchantable timber. The 3-bedroom, 1-bath, 1,217 sf manufactured home rests in a sunny clearing with a cozy woodstove, ideal to enjoy now or while building your dream home with existing utilities. A 552 sf detached garage/shop adds convenience. Embrace privacy, fresh air, and a mini farm lifestyle above the fog, just minutes from Eureka or Arcata.

20 W 3RD STREET, EUREKA
$259,000

Vacant, industrial zoned property located just one block from Highway 101 and two blocks from Old Town Eureka, easily accessible location near the bay. These are two adjoined lots available to merge. This property qualifies for application for a commercial cannabis license.

Community Spotlight

Chloe Schmidt

Chloe Schmidt is a Humboldt local who grew up in Southern Humboldt before moving to Arcata at age 12. She has been dancing her entire life, began teaching at Trillium Dance Studios at just 16, and is now the studio manager. Over two years ago, she started a Senior Ballet class for adults over 70, and the close-knit group has become very special to her.

Chloe moved to Sunny Brae about 3 ½ years ago and has been shopping at Murphy's ever since. She says, "It's convenient; it's only 2 minutes from my house. Murphy's carries everything I need, and everyone there is so nice. That's what keeps me coming back." She adds, "Murphy's has more of a community feel than the other grocery stores."

When it comes to her shopping habits, Chloe always picks up Muddy Waters coffee, supporting a local brand she loves. She also appreciates the pet food section and the variety of local products. The produce and meat quality, she says, is always good.

Supporting local businesses is important to Chloe. "My parents really instilled in me to shop local. I don't ever shop at the big chain grocery stores." She also values Murphy's support for schools, youth sports, and even local Girl Scouts.

"Oh, the employees are so sweet. The checkers have taken the time to get to know me. They always ask about my day." For Chloe, Murphy's is more than a grocery store—it's a community hub. "Every time I go to Murphy's I see someone I know… that's why I love Murphy's!"
